ISFLC Expands Partnership to Strengthen Leadership Development for Iowa Administrators

March 28, 2025— Exciting news for Iowa's school leaders! The Iowa Superintendents Finance & Leadership Consortium (ISFLC) is leveling up its leadership development program through a powerful new partnership. The School Administrators of Iowa (SAI) has officially joined forces with the Iowa Association of School Boards (IASB) and the University of Northern Iowa's Institute for Educational Leadership (IEL)—creating a dynamic alliance that promises to transform professional development for Iowa's administrators.

ISFLC provides a premier professional development program designed to equip superintendents, school business officials, and aspiring superintendents with critical financial and leadership skills. With the combined expertise and resources of these three distinguished organizations, ISFLC is poised to offer an even more robust learning experience, ensuring that Iowa's educational leaders are prepared to navigate the complexities of school administration.

"This partnership marks a significant milestone in our commitment to supporting Iowa's school leaders," said IASB Executive Director D.T. Magee. "By bringing together the strengths of SAI, IASB, and IEL, we are creating a comprehensive network that fosters collaboration, enhances leadership development, and ultimately benefits students across the state."

The collaboration among these organizations underscores a shared vision of strengthening Iowa's education system through continuous learning and professional growth. This partnership will provide school administrators with expanded access to training, resources, and networking opportunities, empowering them to make informed decisions that positively impact their districts and communities.
